Permission Statement for Cleaning and Restoration

Most modern garments such as the item described below are made with materials designed to tolerate the dry cleaning process. However, this is not always the case.

Inferior or inappropriate materials incorporated in your garment, its embroideries, or beading, can be damaged by dry-cleaning.

Tripp's Fine Cleaners will always treat your garment with the care and attention it deserves. However, we cannot be responsible for damage caused to a garment during dry cleaning due to the incorporation of materials, by the manufacturer or anyone else, which are not suitable for the dry cleaning process, or otherwise defective.

In the event we disagree as to the cause of any damage to your garment, it is agreed that the affected garment will be submitted to the International Fabricare Institute (I.F.I.) for a determination of the cause of the damage. The findings of the I.F.I. will be binding.

By signing below you acknowledge and agree to these terms and conditions. Thank you.
